OF
THE GAMBLES
OF FERMANAGH.

1881.

Printed at the "Daily Post" and "Echo" Offices, Victoria Street, Liverpool.

E 28038

The following Pedigree has been compiled mainly from a now scarce pamphlet, entitled, "Family Records of the Gambles of Toronto," a copy of which is appended hereto, but it is rearranged in genealogical order and supplemented by such additions and corrections as I have been able to obtain from various members of the family during the present year.

DEDICATION.

To the memory of my beloved MOTHER, born at Stratford, in Connecticut, in 1767; married at Maugerville, in New Brunswick, in 1784; removed to Upper Canada in 1798, ascending the River St. John, with her five daughters, in a bark canoe, traversing on foot the portages of the Temiscouta route, sheltered only by the heavens and the primeval forest; who added eight other children to her family, trained them up in the fear of God, and fitted to discharge the duties of their station; who lived a widow nearly half-a-century, and died in her ninety-second year;—to the memory of such a Mother, truly a mother in Israel, are the following pages affectionately dedicated by her eldest son,

J. W. GAMBLE.

WOODBIDGE, June 14, 1872.

INTRODUCTION.

In the city of Boston, in years long since gone by, there lived a quaint old gentleman, whose recollections reached back to the Battle of Bunker's Hill. His sterling integrity, sound judgment, generous hospitality, and an overflowing share of the milk of human kindness, caused him to be ranked among the excellent of the earth. Frequent visits on business, to the city of the Puritans, brought me, in early youth, in contact with this kind-hearted old uncle : he was the husband of my mother's eldest sister. Like other old men, he had many crotchets. With some of them I soon became familiar. From him I first learned that every thing in America was the best in the world ; that Democrats were unworthy of confidence ; that on Fridays a four-pounder codfish was the proper dish for dinner, with the pudding served up first. He also informed me that my mother's family were of gentle blood ; that her ancestors were English ; had emigrated to Barbadoes, and thence flitted to Boston, where many of their monuments were standing and in good preservation ; that several family portraits were in his possession, particularly one of Sir John Alleyne, at one time Speaker of the House of Assembly in Barbadoes. He had expended much pains in tracing out their descent, and had several genealogical tables, which it would be wise in me, as my mother's eldest son, to copy. Upon such occasions I felt that it would have been a miserable return for his uniform kindness, not to have treated him to a ride upon his favourite hobby, and hence was derived the first portion of the Family Records. My venerable uncle having no children, had adopted a son of one of my mother's sisters, calling him after his own name, Jeremiah Smith Boies ; and the regularity with which that name appears in all the families of the sisters that had children—and they were not few—seems to indicate a latent hope that the worthy and wealthy old gentleman might be disposed further to increase his family in a similar way, to add to his own comfort and to share in the fruits of his youthful industry.

INTRODUCTION.

In the year 1824, I visited Dublin with the intention of repairing to Enniskillen, and the places in its vicinity, where resided numbers of my father's relations. A severe attack of illness prevented my carrying out my project at that time, and another opportunity did not occur during my sojourn in England.

In Dublin I was visited by a brother of my father's, who spent several days with me. From him I derived much information respecting the different branches of his family. He was a tall, handsome, elderly gentleman, strongly resembling my father, and with quite as exalted an opinion of my paternal ancestors as my Boston uncle entertained for the other side of the house. After my return home, and the lapse of many years, a distant relative of my father's settled in Canada. With him I compared the information received when in Dublin, and, from the different memoranda then in my possession, with him constructed a genealogical tree. This tree has since been revised by two other relations of my father's, who at different times visited me at my residence at Pine Grove, in the township of Vaughan, and afforded me the unspeakable gratification of having some of my father's kith and kin under the shelter of my roof.

As years rolled on, the Families' History in my keeping became a frequent subject of conversation, upon occasions of family visiting; when, finding the desire to obtain a copy, general with the numerous members of our different branches, I determined to have the Records printed for distribution among them, and which I now present, with the sincere and hearty wish for their happiness, here and hereafter.

FAMILY RECORDS

THE GAMBLES OF TORONTO.

Tradition traces our family to that of Lord Eglington, and affirms that we are entitled to estates in Ayrshire.

Our family left Scotland for conscience sake when James the sixth, by fraud, craft and corruption, thrust prelacy upon the Church of Scotland; and they were not, like many others, induced to return by the false promises of Charles.*

JOSIAS GAMBLE, the first of the name of whom the family now have any record; he was married and had issue, of whom mention is made of his eldest son only, viz.:

SOLOMON GAMBLE; he was married and had issue; the name of his eldest son is only mentioned, viz.:

DAVID GAMBLE of Graan, born in 1682, he was married and left issue as follows, viz. : Baptist of Graan, born 1720; David Gamble of Ratonagh; William Gamble of Duross; Andrew, who emigrated to America (query) Virginia; and Ann, married to Captain Cathcart.

BAPTIST GAMBLE of Graan, married Miss Hopper of Crew, Menaghan, and had issue, viz. : Ann, married to James Frith of the Cross; Sarah, married to her cousin,

ISABELLA ELIZEBETH GAMBLE, the third daughter of Dr. Joseph Clarke and Isabella Elizabeth Alleyne, was born at Stratford, in Connecticut—then a colony of Great Britain—on the 24th October, 1767. In the year 1776 her father, faithful to his allegiance, repaired to the British Army in New York, to which place his family followed him. At the peace of 1783, Dr. Clarke removed with his family to New Brunswick (then known as the Province of Acadia) and took up his residence at Mangerville. There his daughter—the subject of this memoir—then in her 17th year, was married, on the 18th May, 1784, to Dr. John Gamble, the eldest son of William Gamble and Leah Tyrer of Duross, near Enniskillen, Ireland. Mr. Gamble was born in 1755; studied physic and surgery at Edinburgh; emigrated to the British Colonies in 1779, and landed in New York in September of that year. Immediately on his arrival, he entered the King's Service as Assistant Surgeon, General Hospital, subsequently he was attached to the "Old Queen's Rangers," and for some time did duty with that Regiment as Surgeon. At the peace of 1783, he, with other American Loyalists, went to New Brunswick. After his marriage, Dr. Gamble practised his profession at St. John, and resided in New Brunswick until 1793, when, having been appointed Assistant Surgeon to the late Regiment of Queen's Rangers by General Simcoe, then Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, he joined his Regiment at Niagara, where it was then quartered, having left his wife and five daughters with her father at Mangerville. Mrs. Gamble continued to reside with her father until 1798, when her husband having in the meantime (July, 1796) been promoted to the surgency of his Regiment, she, with her five daughters, the eldest then but thirteen years of age, accompanied by her father and a sister (afterwards married to the Hon. Samuel Smith), ascended the river St. John in a bark canoe, crossed the portage by Temiscouata to the Riviere du Loup, came up the St. Lawrence, and joined Dr. Gamble, then with his Regiment in Garrison at York. In 1802, the Queen's Rangers were disbanded, and Mrs. Gamble accompanied her husband and family to Kingston, where he practised his profession until his death, in the fifty-sixth year of his age, on the 1st September, 1811. She remained in Kingston until the year 1820, when, with the portion of her family then at home, she removed to Toronto, and there continued to reside, surrounded by her offspring, until her death, which took place on the 9th March, 1859. Mrs. Gamble had thirteen children, nine daughters and four sons; Isabella, the eldest, married to Robert Charles Horne, Esq., Assistant-Surgeon Glengarry Light Infantry; Mary Ann married to Colonel Sinclair, Royal Artillery; Sarah Hannah Boies, to James Geddes, Esq., Assistant-Surgeon, Medical Staff; Leah Tyrer, to the Hon. William Allan; Catherine, who died unmarried; Jane, married to Benjamin Whitney, Esq.; Rachel Crookshank to Sir James Buchannan Macaulay; Magdalene, to Thomas William Birchall, Esq.; and Mary Ann, unmarried; John William, of Vaughan; William of Milton, Etobicoke; Clarke, of Toronto; and Joseph, who died in infancy. Of these thirteen, seven only survive; but Mrs. Gamble's descendants have already reached the large number of two hundred and four, and some of her children's children's children are now upwards of thirty years of age. The remarkable longevity of a large number of the American loyalist emigrants, who came to the British Provinces after the American Revolution, has been noticed by the Lord Bishop of New Brunswick, as a striking instance of the fulfilment of the
